

“To Jilly, With Love”

Copyright 2018 by Amanda Serrano

Opening narration:

Jillian Beaumont, seventeen, delicate, beautiful and cultured. She lives in a world of her own. Doted upon by her elderly parents, Jillian never seems to change, she never seems to grow any older. Her days filled with the ticking of a metronome, as she plays piano and receives the same dolls over and over again. She is not held hostage with hate, but with adoration. Barricaded from reality... be it fear, loss or pain, her life is merely smoke and mirrors.

Closing narration:

How great would life be, if we lived a little every day, instead of always waiting for tomorrow? What if the laws of science were stronger than the laws of nature? If dust to dust became no more. Would we still cherish the time we had with those we love? Only time, and The Twilight Zone will tell...
