

“Plenty of Fish in the Sea”

Copyright 2018 by Maroon Corey

Opening Narration:

Enter one Steven W. Jones, a dock manager by day who lately finds himself with no one home at night save his children, and then only on weekends. Perhaps it's animus, curiosity, or the chance to enact fantasy that finds Steve docked in the afterhours haunts of singles, sportingly casting his newly-freed line into the waters of romance. At present, his dingy has slipped into a particularly enticing alcove...of The Twilight Zone.

Closing Narration:

If you would have told Steven Jones that he would exit with not one, not two, but an entire net full of catches that night he sailed into the “Captain's Wharf”, his bravado may have surpassed that of Blackbeard himself. But, as we all know, too much of a good thing can end up as repulsive as a bucket of rotting fish; especially when you've been caught hook, line, and sinker...in the Twilight Zone.