Opening Narration:

You view upon the tedious personage of one Edgar L. Pueblo, a night worker by trade and a sleeper by day. You see Mr. Pueblo has a condition. Since the age of 10 he has been unable to close his eyes and drift off to dreamland at night. Not through choice or fear, but as if something were mentally blocking him from doing so. 20 years later and the routine has become a way of life for the diligent gas station attendant. However, work schedules often seem to change, in The Twilight Zone.

Closing Narration:

We bid goodbye to Mr. Edgar Pueblo, sleeping the sleep of the just. The kind of nightmares he had to face were the kind of his past. The literal demons of his mind now most assuredly locked away. He is one who has earned a good night’s rest in the confining hammock we call, The Twilight Zone.
