

“And They Lived Happily Ever After”

copyright 2018 by Gary Lynn Clevenger

Opening narration:

A popular song tells us there's no such thing as Dr Seuss, Disneyland, or Mother Goose. In just a moment a couple of newlyweds are going to prove that statement false.

Jack and Jillian Hill are about to show the world that there is a special magic for those who dare to wish upon that occasional falling star on a magical summer evening, and that upon do so, sometimes, wishes really do come true.

Closing narration:

It's often said that money can't buy happiness, it can only buy you things that will make you happy.

The truth is, many of us spend our entire lives looking for happiness never really realizing that happiness has been in front of us for most of that time...

These rules are applicable to each and everyone of us, in or out of the Twilight Zone.

Thank you and goodnight.
