

“Digital Paradox”

by Gary Lynn Clevenger, copyright 2017

Opening Narration

Imagine a future where human contact is all but extinct.

No more kisses hello, or goodbye.

No more embraces from old friends.

A time when humanity’s only means of contact is a handheld electronic device.

This device separates physical reality from digital fantasy.

In just a moment...

18-year old Amy Smith will have to choose between her own life of reality or fantasy.

Amy's life-changing choice will carry its own set of consequences, not only for Amy, but for everyone around her, in and out of the Twilight Zone.

Closing Narration

It’s more important to live in the present, not the future nor the past; we only have control of this particular moment.

Yesterday is gone and tomorrow isn’t promised. This lesson holds true for Amy—and all of us—in and out of the Twilight Zone.
