Opening Narration:

B.W. Billington, corporate magnate, has everything money can buy—a house in the Hamptons, a beautiful wife, and wealthy, well-educated kids. The one thing Mr. Billington lacks is empathy for his fellow man.

In a moment, Mr. Billington is going to find himself knee deep at the height of the Great Depression with a wallet full of money and a empty heart. In a moment, Mr. Billington's unsympathetic nature is about to alter his future reality forever because of his self-serving demeanor.

This is the Twilight Zone.

Closing Narration:

A kind word or deed can change many lives. The same can be said about hate. ... Tonight's tale of compassion and spreadsheets in the Twilight Zone.
