

“They’re Here”

by Reuben Nelson, copyright 2017

Opening Narration:

They live among us going back to the dawn of human history and are believed to live in their own world. Civilization cannot survive without them. Marketing thrives because of them. We offer advice, guidance and a peaceful co-existence. They look like us, yet evolve over time. When there is trouble and a need for resolution, they seek you and I out. Who are “they”? Let’s just call them.....The Teenager.

Closing Narration:

From Ray Bradbury’s Dandelion Wine, “The beginning of wisdom, as they say. When you’re seventeen you know everything. When you’re twenty-seven if you still know everything, you’re still seventeen.” What Bob McKenzie tries to do is understand and help his daughter, Samantha, through her teen years. There are no easy answers and lessons are not only confined to The Twilight Zone.