Opening Narration

Meet Don Johnson, who rode a wave of popularity during the 80's, playing Sonny Crockett on the hedonistic TV show Miami Vice. But Hollywood is a fickle beast, and when an actor no longer satisfies the goddess of success, it discards them, causing one to loathe the character that turned them into the flavor of the month. Despite his attempts to outrun his fate, the sun soaked sands of his pastel paradise past will catch up with him...in the Twilight Zone.

Closing Narration

It is said that when one door closes, another one opens. It is also said that a man can never truly shake the shackles of his past. Unable to cast away the chains that bind him, Mr. Johnson has learned this lesson about the cruel and relentless Hollywood star making machine the hard way. During a short stay in the Art Deco district...of The Twilight Zone.
