Opening Narration:

Introduced here is the “canvas” on which our tale is to be told. The stage is set, the cast: well rehearsed. Tonight’s production? We simply ask our star: A young aristocrat, who like all others in his age group idolizes the beauty of youth, and hopes that the proverbial ‘party’ never stops. Unfortunately for Mr. Dorian Gray, the party has only begun. His invitation? Stamped on the back of the painting he’s modeling for. An invitation marked “Admit One” to The Twilight Zone...

Closing Narration:

Exit, Mr. Dorian Gray, who has learned the true weight behind the phrase “Be careful what you wish for,” and that “Once in a lifetime deals” all too often extract the highest of prices. As for his painting, it hangs in an exclusive exhibit dedicated to lessons learned, and penances paid. The Picture of Dorian Gray, on loan from the Night Gallery exclusively... to The Twilight Zone.
