Opening Narration:

Introducing Mr. Edward Carson, 35, Manager of Telemarketing at Cayuga Solutions. Unfortunately, Mr. Carson lacks one important trait: people skills. He fails to treat his customers with respect and dignity, promising almost anything to make the sale. Every morning at approximately 7:30, he enters an express elevator to the 59th floor of an office building in midtown Manhattan. On this particular morning, Mr. Carson will be entering a different kind of elevator, one that was designed and constructed in a place we call.....the Twilight Zone.

Closing Narration:

There's a line in Shakespeare's Henry V that says "Give the Devil his due." In this elevator, B does not stand for Basement, but rather Burning, as in Hell. And as Mr. Carson is now horribly aware, he is on a one-way trip down to his final destination --- a place that soon will add one more soul to its growing population.....in the Twilight Zone.
