

“Terminal”

© 2020 by Matthew Hawes

Opening Narration

An airport represents one of society's great meeting grounds, an intersection of life's beneficiaries and supplicants alike. For Mr. Peter Leighman, en route to LA in a last-ditch effort to defeat the cancer raging within, it was, until moments ago, simply a place to take a nap. But silence has replaced the bustling crowds, and each gate now offers passage not to other cities, but to a different decade of his sixty years... and to the Twilight Zone.

Closing Narration

Now departing: Mr. Peter Leighman, who when offered the chance to hit repeat on life chose instead to let it keep playing. And who resumes an uncertain journey with a rare gift: the confidence of one who accepts he is the sum of both the highs and lows and remembers that no one ever truly travels alone, whether in the past or present, in the everyday world... or in the Twilight Zone.