Opening Narration:

The residents of Alabaster Road have been startled by an unknown creature. What started with missing pets has progressed to missing people. When a small group of hunters is sent to take care of the problem, they will find that they have wandered too far into the woods, and have marched unknowingly into the distant past, 80 million years ago, trapped in the dark heart of the Twilight Zone.

Closing Narration:

The hunters of Alabaster Road once believed that the world followed a set of rules that they could comprehend. What they have come to realize is that the past is just as alive as the present. As all living things must consume, so too does the past reach out with teeth and claws to drag us back to that primordial age. The beast was trapped at the dawn of time, but now dwells among us as a visitor from the Twilight Zone.
