Opening Narration

Pan left. Two men sitting opposite one another and although they share a similar physical appearance, their dispositions could not be more different. In a twist of fate, it seems that these two will be the leading men in a play that’s about to start titled “The Last Day of Earth.” Please take your seats for a matinee performance in... The Twilight Zone

Closing Narration

There is no stronger emotion in the human language than the will to survive. Case in point. As the curtains close on our protagonists, they take a final bow concluding their roles in saving the planet. The wrong man in the right place can make all the difference. Proven here today on a backstage lot of... The Twilight Zone.
