

“The Planet of the Blind”

© 2020 by Brian James Lane

Opening Narration:

The Canopus has landed, albeit far from gracefully. This is the end of a long journey, spanning eons of time and crossing astronomical units of space. The answer to a call made so long ago now rests precariously at the top of a craggy cliff. The slowly waking crew of the Canopus now await a rescue that may never come. Help wasn't dispatched simply because the crash was never seen. The inhabitants of this sunless planet are as blind as the deepest cave fish. It will take more than ingenuity for the crew to signal the inhabitants for aid. It will take faith, hope, and a little borrowed luck from ...the Twilight Zone.

Closing Narration:

To mix metaphors, there are none so blind as those who will not see but there is also more than one way to skin a cat. A little parable from this side of ...the Twilight Zone.