

“Writer's Paradise”

© 2020 by Richard Friedman

Opening Narration

Theodore Zetgaard dreamed of writing fiction novels instead of the dull routine of his mundane job as an actuary.

He rested his head on his wooden desk, and when he awoke, he stood in a writer's paradise. Three sisters sat on the floor refining their writing skills. Nearby, an odd-looking man with clothes from a by-gone era scribbled notes in a journal.

This was an ideal spot to begin his new career...Theodore Zetgaard, welcome to The Twilight Zone.

Closing Narration

Mr. Zetgaard dined with Royals, conversed with Voltaire and John Milton, watched Babe Ruth smack the game-winning Home Run, and enjoyed a concert performed by one hell-of-a-band, then finished his New York Times bestselling novel.

Theodore Zetgaard got the job he always dreamed of ...in the Twilight Zone.