

“TV Dreams”

© 2021 by Scott Talbot Evans

Opening Narration

Imagine, if you will, a man who spends his days staring at a tiny glowing piece of glass, the technical term for which is television screen. A man so obsessed with one particular program that he lives vicariously through it, in fact believing that his life is actually taking place inside an episode of said program. Perhaps you’ve heard of it. It’s quite popular. It’s called ... the Twilight Zone.

Closing Narration

As so our tale sadly comes to an end. Our hero spent too much time dreaming and not enough staying “woke.”

Alas, poor Yorick, I knew him well ... in the Twilight Zone.