Opening Narration

For something to exist there has to be someone who can account for it. Or can something exist for someone that does not exist for someone else? Well, John Knippers is about to learn what exists and what does not is left to the unexplained phenomena of The Twilight Zone.

Closing Narration

Well as Knippers just learned what exists and what doesn't, can bend the rules of human consciousness. Where a lonely man in the woods of solitude is never alone, as there always exist at the very least the thoughts of man. And that can never be truly erased in a universe called The Twilight Zone.
