Opening Narration

Here lies Larry. A short life stricken with disease that for Larry was Fun with a no-holds-barred match to laugh at any situation consumed His every minute. It is said that opposites attract so make way for Elizabeth, His widow, not being the brightest jewel in the box, tips the Funeral Director a 10 spot to insure that Larry doesn't laugh at his own funeral. Like some kind of observation post, she's about to take notice of another chapter of the Twilight Zone.

Closing Narration

Feelings of grief take on every form of isolation as Elizabeth spills her drink and laughs because everything is funny now, in this chapter of her life. Laughter is no longer a word in any dictionary and cannot to be found anywhere in the universe, leaving her to laugh alone in the padded depths of the Twilight Zone.
