Opening Narration

Say hello to Bill Oliver. You’ve seen him working in your local library. He’s an ordinary man who never rose to meet the expectations of his elementary school teachers, his mother, his wife. He spends six ordinary days a week here, in a low-level administrative position, exercising what little power he has over the unfortunate patrons of the non-fiction section, Level C, Dash 2.

What Bill Oliver could not possibly know is that his life is about to take an exceedingly extraordinary turn, one that veers sharply to the left onto a one-way street, where his ordinary perception has no reference point. He’s headed imminently, irrevocably...into the Twilight Zone.

Closing Narration

Bill is emerging from his experience wounded, but wiser, owing to the dusky reminder of generosity and responsibility that he gleaned on an unanticipated journey into the back-closet of the mind known...as the Twilight Zone.
