

“Heal!”

Opening Narration

Great Depression, year nine. The people need a miracle, and Peter Paul Herald delivers the goods. An inch taller than Gary Cooper, a few pounds heavier than Shirley Temple, this teenage faith healer has restored bodies and souls across the Dust Bowl. Today, he’s pitched his tent in Hollywood, a town ready to teach a gangly boy-man a lesson in hokum and hope. A town on the outskirts of the Twilight Zone.

Closing Narration

Peter Paul Herald has staged his final revival. The president’s legs will fail again before his train reaches Washington, but his heart will beat another six years, long enough to lead America against the Axis. In healing FDR, Peter Paul joins the oncoming legions who will make the ultimate sacrifice to win the war. Blow Taps, wail a gospel lament for the Teen Titan of Tulsa, an unsung hero bound for Tinseltown, last seen in the Twilight Zone.
