

“My Three Ghosts”

Opening Narration

Introduction to an eclectic cast of characters. A turn-of-the-century aristocrat, a surgeon turned soldier, and the valedictorian of the class of 1959. They wouldn't normally find themselves together, but they've been united across space and time because they share one thing in common: they're deceased.

You see, these three ghosts are prohibited from crossing beyond the pearly gates until they successfully guide a young man along his journey through life. These specters of yesteryear are looking for their metaphorical wings, but along the way they'll find something else—in The Twilight Zone.

Closing Narration

An aristocrat, a soldier, a valedictorian – and an old man who was once a very young one. They bridged their divides to cross over into the great beyond after spending a lifetime together. A tale such as this is pure fantasy, of course. But reconciliation and repentance need not be limited to the confines of—the Twilight Zone.
