Opening Narration

Time is in a constant state of fleeting, designed to hide the unknown. Even when the darkest curtains of the future begin to be opened, they once again find the hands of time pulling them shut. Watch as Jane Monroe, a theater student, tries to step just off the ticking path, here in the Twilight Zone.

Closing Narration

They say that pressure is the way to make diamonds. Or in the case we just witnessed, watch something crack. It becomes a test in realizing the value of oneself not measured by a single talent. Instead, they take a journey further from their current place towards the never-ending stretch found only in the Twilight Zone.
