

“Tomorrow Isn't Promised”

© 2023 by Gary Clevinger

Opening Narration

Mr. Bernard Humprey and his mean bitter demeanor of not appreciating the people and things he currently has in his life has turned him into the person he never wanted to become—a bitter man who is constantly waiting for his big break in a compromised life filled with what could have been.

Mr. Smith is about to take a very long bizzare journey into that perfectworld he has created inside his mind. A world with different people, different things and most definitely a different set of circumstances.

A world that could only be found...in the Twilight Zone.

Closing Narration

We fixate on the past and things we cannot change. We fixate on tomorrow, not knowing what's going to happen. We should have fixated on today. But it's too late—that was yesterday.

A valuable lesson Mr Humprey should have learned before entering the Twilight Zone.