Opening Narration

Meet Aubrey Dent, an aging, angry man considered to be ruthless in business and unstoppable in life. He is surrounded by those who want only the excesses his wealth provides. He is about to discover that loyalty, friendship and love cannot be bought, and that there is no comfort in money when you are called to account for your existence. Which way will the scales of justice tip for Aubrey when he enters...the Twilight Zone?

Closing Narration

At the graveside of Aubrey Dent stands a priest and an impatient groundskeeper. It is not tears falling on the coffin, just a cold rain. Those who clamored to be at his side in life have abandoned him in death. Perhaps a stark reminder that all bills must be paid in full and the currency of choice just might be your soul...in the Twilight Zone.
