

“An Uncivil War”

copyright © 2024 by Vern Shird

Opening Narration

Submitted for your approval, a country divided. People living paycheck to paycheck, unable to afford housing, or a family for that matter. A government who does not care about its citizens. An unchecked flow of illegal immigrants entering the divided country that is on a brink of a civil war. No, this is not something out of a George Orwell or Kurt Vonnegut novel. This is the non-fiction version of the United States, circa 2024 A.D.

Closing Narration

Abraham Lincoln once said that “a house divided against itself cannot stand.” A prophecy over 150 years in the making. The United States, the greatest nation in the history of the planet wasn't destroyed by a nuclear holocaust, nor were they destroyed by an invading military. The nation destroyed itself from within. Rich against poor, red against blue, young against old. A civil war that was not civil at all.