

“Election Day”

copyright © 2024 by Henry Lowengard

Opening Narration

In this small town, Saylor's Corner, election time is exciting. It's a patriotic duty to cast your vote for people to represent you.

Neighbors come to bring out the old mechanical voting machines, reset them, and transport them to polling places. All to ensure the integrity of the election.

It is said all politics is local, and that's something to keep in mind as you pull the lever to close the curtain and cast your vote. But you may find upon entering the booth that politics... is in the Twilight Zone.

Closing Narration

Voting is making a choice about your future. Often, you can't know the consequences of your choices when voting. The people of Saylor's Corner though, got a startling preview of how each of their votes would affect the future. Next time you vote, vote carefully, for you may find you have chosen to live in... the Twilight Zone.