Opening Narration

Recently one of New York’s finest passed on his 25th Birthday.

Seemingly a life cut tragically short, but that earlier he bowled with his child, grandchild, great grandchild and the youngster, great, great grandchild.

He knocked down 100 pins, remarkably well considering his condition.

Passing on one’s birthday, generally is a 1 in 365 chance. But in his case the probability was 1 in 1,462 due to his DNA coming directly from ... the Twilight Zone.

Closing Narration

As you’ve realized New York’s finest was born on Leap Day 1924 and died precisely 100 years hence on his actual; 25th Birthday. Incredible—sure.

But consider the odds of another of New York’s finest coming into our living rooms weekly with dramatic stories that showcase morality, and common good, provoking us to consider our tendency toward hostility.

It’s with great honor that we salute New York’s most finest—the Creator of ... the Twilight Zone.
