

“Lost In A Good Book”
copyright © 2024 by Chris King

Opening Narration

A wise man once said, “A room without books is like a body without a soul.” What that says about the man you see here, we’ll leave for you to decide. This is a man with no inner life, his mind devoted only to facts and figures with no time for flights of fancy. But soon Henry Burgess will discover there is much to be found in a book. Maybe a way to, or a way out of, The Twilight Zone.

Closing Narration

Books cannot clothe or shelter a man, they cannot feed him or bring him warmth. But they can do all these things and more to his soul. For those like Mr Burgess who don’t know how, we suggest you look it up under E for Escape—in The Twilight Zone.