Opening Narration

Mr. Lee Diamond: unknown screenwriter, soon destined to live out in the streets, is confident his latest script will be his golden ticket into the glamorous world of movie making. But Mr. Diamond is about to discover the true cost of notoriety and fame, and how far one must go before their dreams become reality.

The detours on the road to success can often lead to dead-ends, but this particular one Mr. Diamond finds himself on will guide him into the beating heart of the Twilight Zone.

Closing Narration

Famed screenwriter; Hollywood's golden boy: Lee Diamond has just been reminded of that old adage, “Not All That Glitters is Gold.” Through the dense fog of accolades and bright lights, none shine as radiant as the movie screen Mr. Diamond forever resides in, cementing his place amongst those whose light can only be seen from the other side of the Twilight Zone.
