

“The Celluloid Prison”

copyright © 2024 by Andrés Briano

Opening Narration

Picture if you will, a Drive-In Movie Theatre from a rural town. The date is the last Sunday of summer. The time is 8:14pm. The smell of reheated pop-corn hits patrons from as far away as the dirt road. The double feature is about to start.

The only person in the establishment not having a good time is Garth Adams, age: 48, occupation: film projectionist. Through the projection porthole he looks down with repugnance at anyone having fun, particularly teenagers behind the wheel of their old man's car. In just a moment, when Mr. Adams cranks up the projector, he will be transported to a reality in which he fits even less than this one. A reality called... the Twilight Zone.

Closing Narration

Missing: one angry little man. Name: Garth Adams, age 48. Now imprisoned forever in the celluloid film of a motion picture shot on location... in the Twilight Zone.