

“The Zone Within the Zone”
copyright © 2024 by Ron Adams

Opening Narration

The date is June 26th, 1964. Precisely one week after “The Bewitching Pool” aired — the final episode of ... The Twilight Zone.

Closing Narration

Jeb Sharewood, age 10, awoke. He felt odd; it was neither light nor dark. Jeb checked his sister’s bedroom, it was empty? He dashed outside to the swimming pool, there wasn’t one. “How will I get to Aunt T?”

He peeked in his parent’s bedroom — they’re snuggling, not divorcing. Am I a mannequin, or one of five characters he thought? Jeb glanced in the mirror expecting to see duel images, or perhaps a Hitch Hiker. “Please not Willoughby!”

A saying he wrote two years previous hung by his bed.

It’s a good life because I got my big tall wish.

Jeb mused, “Will the real Jeb Sharewood please go back to sleep.” He drifted off — peacefully in the zone.

Tonight’s tale of reality and reruns from ... The Twilight Zone.