

“This Elevator Goes Everywhere But Up Or Down”
copyright © 2024 by Kevin J. Miller

Opening Narration

Submitted for your approval: Fifty-four-year-old Vincent Kelm, thirty years in the advertising business. He’s a widower, and the father of a young man who passed away ten years ago today. Leaving his apartment, Vincent Kelm takes the elevator down to the parking garage to drive to work.

He’ll get there, but he’s going to take a detour first. There always is one in the Twilight Zone.

Closing Narration

Vincent Kelm was there when his son Timothy started to overdose, and hesitated, before calling 911. This teaches Vincent Kelm after cancer took his wife Elizabeth away, he no longer loved his son, but only tolerated him, because Timothy was all that was left of Elizabeth.

Timothy Kelm, hard-working but ultimately unsuccessful sculptor and painter. And so, for his father Vincent, Timothy might as well have been from an alien planet—but they both can be found in the Twilight Zone.